Gen. Joffre and Gen. Pau, themen

The income tax is to be increased from 1 to 1½ per cent. and the ex-of office-holders.

There were 7,781 votes cast in Christian county last year, estimating the Newstead vote not counted at 261, the same as the year before.
In the coming election it is estimated that 7,000 votes will be cast, about 4,000 white and 3,000 colored.

German soldiers are reported to have destroyed Dinant, another Bel-

citizens were lined up and shot in the public square.

Richard I. Manning, a planter and John G. Richards by a majority estiwere nominated by substantially the same majorities.

Apart from the announcement that the German forces have fallen back before the offensive tactics of the allies on the line from Manteuil-leesting report Tuesday was contained in a dispatch to the London Evening

French commander, Gen. Pau, is given as authority for the statement that the Allies have won a victory at Perey-Sur-Oise, in which the Imperial Guard, under the Crown Prince annihilated by a British force.

GERMANS LOSING IN GREAT CONFLICT ON BATTLE LINE FROM PARIS TO VERDUN

SPEAKING CAMPAIGN

Launched For Dry Side By Three Big Meetings This Week.

EVANGELIST STUART HELPS.

Spoke At Tabernacle Tuesday Night and Yesterday To Great Crowds.

The speaking campaign of the prohibitionists was begun this week and from now on there will be great activity on the stump.

Judge Walter Knight spoke at the court house Monday morning and in the afternoon a general rally was held. James West presided and speeches were made by John Gates and Mayor R. W. Lisanby, of Princeton; Jno. D. Shaw, of Cadiz; Rev. J.
T. Hawkins, George Street and John Street, of Elkton; Rev. J. M. Gordon and Mr. McLeod, of Madisonville; Dr. Croft and J. A. Robinson, col., of Crofton, all of whom told of the workings of prohibition in their respective towns. J. M. Neblett, formerly of Clarksville, also told of the law in that city. All agreed that prohibition had not hurt those places.

Tuesday night, Rev. George R.
Stuart, the evangelist, made the first of two speeches at the Tabernacle and again spoke yesterday afternoon. He was greeted by very large crowds. His first address was devoted to a general advocacy of prohibition as a great moral question in which he thought the newspapers should take the lead. He was severe in his criticisms of newspapers whose editorial columns were not used for the furtherance of prohibitory laws.
Mr. Stuart is one of the ablest speakers on the stand for prohibition and the interest aroused by his stirring addresses will not be allowed to subside. Many speakers will canvass all parts of the county from now on.

"Dogs of War."

The familiar phrase "dogs of war" originated hundreds of years ago when warring nations used trained hundreds of the male inhabitants, because it is claimed shots were fired from the heights overlooking the city. At one time 100 prominent citizens were lined up and shot in the public square.

With Russian Cossacks landing at Ostend, French Arabs pouring in from the South and British South Africans, Australians and East Indians arriving daily at Channel ports, the Germans are liable to find between them and their home plate a

THE ALLIES ARE WINNING BIG FIGHT NEAR PARIS

Reported That Germans Ask Twenty-four Hour Armistice, Which Is Refused With Curt Message by French Commander Telling Them to Get Out of France.

FRENCH SOLDIERS TELL OF VICTORY

Three Days' Battle Won By Allies Was of More Importance
Than at First Supposed, 30,000 Germans Captured by The French.

Paris, Sept. 9.—The battle proceeding to the east of Paris appears to be the most important and the most stubbornly fought combat of the campaign. Military authorities decline to indicate the number of men engaged, but hundreds of thousands are participating on both sides.

According to those in position to obtain authentic information, the casualties have been so great that the Germans have requested an armistice of 24 hours. The armistice was refused with the response:

"We grant you that time to get out of France."

An official communication issued by the war office shows that the German wing, while retreating before the allies, has offered the sternest resistance, delivering several fierce but unsuccessful counterattacks.

Accounts of wounded soldiers who have reached Paris indicate that the result of the three days' fighting has been more favorable to the allies than at first supposed. They say the German losses in killed were enormous and that a great number of prisoners were taken.

One French officer estimates the prisoners at 30,000.

Russians Sweeping Galicia.

London, Sept. 9.—The British and French forces north and east of Paris have had further success against the German invaders, according to the official bulletin issued Tuesday; while in Galicia the Russians continue with considerable success their attempt to envelope and defeat the Austrian army of 400,000 men under Gen. Auffenberg.

For the moment, at least, interest centers in the campaign in France, for it is felt that the battle proceeding there is the first real crisis of the war, and will have a vital affect on the outcome.

The allies, according to a bulletin issued by the French war office, have successfully repulsed another German attempt to penetrate their left center between Fere-Champenoise and Vitry-le-Francois, where the roads and railways are more suited

OPERATION ON DR. M'CORMACK

The Former Secretary of State Board of Health Said To Be Better.

A telegram was received from Rochester, Minn., Tuesday to the effect that Dr. J. N. McCormack, for many years secretary of the State Board of Health, has successfully undergone a serious operation at that place. During the recent Legislature Dr. McCormack contracted a bad case of influenza, from which he never fully recovered.

Peace Talk Causes Drop.

Wheat prices tumbled Tuesday on reported victories for the allies being taken to mean possibility of sudden peace. A reaction ensued, but the Chicago market closed heavy at 5 to 5½ net decline. Corn finished 1½ to 2½ off; oats down 1½ to 1½ to 1½ to 1½ down, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a loss of 47½c.

LIBRARY OPENING

Ready For a Book Reception
On Tuesday September Fifteenth.

THE BOARD ISSUES ADDRESS.

Gives Outline Sketch of The Movement Carried To Success.

To the Citizens of Hopkinsville:

About two years ago, Andrew Carnegie donated to the City of Hopkinsville the sum of Fifteen Thousand Dollars to build and equip a free Public Library for the use of its citizens and Mr. Chas. M. Meacham, your then Mayor, appointed the undersigned as the Board of Directors of the Hopkinsville Public Library and our appointments were confirmed by your City Council, and it was directed to erect and equip a Library Building out of this princely gift from Mr. Carnegie on a portion of Peace Park. After many delays in obtaining satisfactory plans of a building suitable for the purpose for which the donation was made, and one that could be constructed within the limits of the donation, and after widely advertising for bids on the construction of same, and having bidders here from Nashville, Evansville and one or two other places, the contract was let to Forbes Manufacturing Company, which was the lowest and best bidder. Then there being some question as to the right to put a Library Building on Peace Park without conflict of the terms of the will of Mr. John C. Latham, in giving the Park to the City, a suit was brought, enjoining us from erecting the building on Peace Park and both our Circuit Court and Court of Appeals decided that same could not be built on Peace Park. Then Mayor Meacham took options on every available lot close in the center of the City and the City Council, after considering price and location unanimously directed him to purchase from the 1st. Presbyterian Church its lot on the corner of 8th and Liberty Streets. The lot it offered fronted 70 feet on Liberty street, and extended back 100 feet, with 8th street, and dirt was broken for your Library Building in December 1913, and your Board considers it fortunate that the Court's decision was unfavorable to the building of the Library on the Latham lot, for your Library Building is now as near the center of population as it could be placed, is convenient to the New Postoffice Building, to the Churches and Hotels down town, and when the City finances will permit, we are satisfied your City Council will improve 8th Street, and it will be only a short time before the surrounding property owners will find it profitable to improve their properties.

Germans Repulsed.

The French are still sticking below the Lorraine frontier and here, according to the war office, have repulsed a German attack on the line between Nancy and Chateau Salins.

In Alsace, where the French advanced so quickly at the beginning of the war, there has been a long respite from serious fighting. This is due, in the opinion of military experts, to the withdrawal of the Germans, who were needed in the west, and probably to the return to Austria of troops sent to the assistance of the Germans last month.

The Austrians in Galicia seem to be in an extremely dangerous position and if they are defeated by the Russians, it will be a second Leamberg for them. They appear to have other troubles, too. Reports persist that Emperor Francis Joseph is dangerously ill; that there are internal dissensions in the dual monarchy, and that Italy, Bulgaria and Rou-mania are awaiting Austria's defeat by Russia to appropriate some of the vast territories on her southern frontier.

The Servians having driven all Austrian troops out of her territory, have commenced an advance into Bosnia from the north.

We are glad to report to you that the building is practically completed and will soon be ready for the use of the public. We have a better start in the matter of books than most libraries, by reason of the generosity of those who have had in charge a Public Library in Hopkinsville for seventeen years. Their gift of nearly five thousand volumes, including the Perry gift, and the John C. Latham donation, makes a fine nucleus for a Library. This collection of books has already been delivered to the new Public Library, but we need many more books to make it meet the requirements of our reading public, and we urge you, one and all, to accept the invitation extended to you to come and inspect the Library Tuesday, Sept.
15th, from 2 p. m., to 9 p. m., and if you have a book or set of books that

ELECTION ORDERED

By Judge Knight For Commission Government For Hopkinsville.

MAJORITY PETITION VOTES.

If Adopted Election Will Take Place In November
1915.

County Judge Walter Knight on Monday passed upon the petition for the privilege of voting on a commission form of government for Hopkinsville and ordered the election as requested in the petition, which contained 1153 names, a clear majority of the votes of the city. Not more than 50 voters to whom the petition was presented failed to sign it. If the commission form is adopted at the election in November, it provides for the nomination next August of four candidates, on a non-partisan ticket. These will be voted for at the regular election and the two receiving the highest votes will be elected for terms of two years at salaries of $1800 a year. Mayor Yost will be the third commissioner for the two remaining years of his present term of four years. The commission of these members would take charge Dec 1, 1916, superseding the present fourth class council, which has never been put upon a third-class basis.

You would like to contribute towards making this one of the best and most up-to-date Libraries in Kentucky, bring them with you; or if you cannot come, send them on that day and they will be thankfully received. Mr. Carnegie gave us the building and the City pays for the upkeep and for such books as we can buy out of the appropriation allowed us after paying running expenses, but that is not sufficient at present for our needs. Under the law the Fiscal Court or the county has the right to make annual appropriations and thereby obtain for the citizens of the county the same right to the use of the Library as enjoyed by the citizens of Hopkinsville, and we hope that they will look into the matter, and that they in their wisdom will take advantage of their opportunity and make this appropriation. We could invest all of same in books, and then your Board would like to be able to invite everyone in the county to make use of the splendid institution on the same terms as those who live within the City limits.

The success of the Library depends upon how much you use it, and the purpose of Mr. Carnegie in giving us this beautiful and splendid building, that we have, and the purpose of the City is making an annual appropriation for its upkeep and the purpose of your Board of Directors in giving their time and thought to the construction of the Building, will only be carried out when you each and every one consider this your building and make full use of the opportunity it offers for pleasure and profit in studying and reading the books therein. Come and inspect the Building and equipment Tuesday and bring a book or books if you have them to spare and then when the Library is ready for use, come back and use it.

Stanley's Instance.

Washington, Sept. 9.—David H.
Clark and Robert Dorsey, of Henderson, were appointed Monday to be midshipmen at Annapolis, by Representative A. O. Stanley.

David H. Clark is the son of David Clark and has been in school at An-very bright young man, 15 years of age, and before his appointment had been attending the local high school at Henderson. He will take the examination next April.

Robert Dorsey, the son of Judge John L. Dorsey, 17 years of age, has also been a high school pupil of that place. Henderson should be proud that she has such splendid young men to represent her at Annapolis.

MEN'S BELONGINGS

By VERN POEHLMAN.

"Why is it," demanded pretty Mrs.
Penton of a company of young matrons who had assembled at her house for afternoon tea, "that a man's belongings are often more trying, more irritating to one's nerves than even the man himself?"

"What kind of belongings do you mean?" inquired young Mrs. Troy with a smile that seemed to say that she knew what Mrs. Penton was going to say.

"Oh, I mean what in official terms is called their 'personal effects,' their clothes."

"Yes, clothes are about all the personal belongings men are allowed to have," laughed a small matron. "But even clothes are trying at times. Can't you understand the feelings of the woman who wanted a divorce just because she couldn't stand it to see a man's clothes hanging in her closet?"

"In her closet!" echoed Mrs. Troy.
"Well, if she could get her husband to hang his clothes in any closet, I think she ought to have been satisfied.
What irritates me is to see my husband's clothes hanging over all the chairs."

"Isn't it strange," mused Mrs. Pen-ton, "that one can grow quite romantic over a woman's empty glove, her opera coat, or her dancing slippers, but did anybody ever grow poetic over a man's glove or his tuxedo or his pumps?"

"Do you know," spoke up the small matron, "that one of the most trying experiences of my life as a housekeeper is putting away my husband's faun-dry?"

"Well, really," said Mrs. Troy, "if you never have anything to do more trying than that I think you are not in danger of an immediate breakdown."

"But there's something so hard and uncompromising about a laundered shirt. It seems to be the very symbol of a man's commercial spirit. I never take the pins out of a shirt of my husband's, but I feel like musing it all up and making it amenable to reason."

"The only opportunity that a man has to betray his individuality in the matter of clothes is in his choice of ties," declared Mrs. Penton, "and see what he wears! They say a woman's history might be written from an inspection of the clothes in her closet, and I think a man's biography might,
with equal truth, be gathered from the drawer in which he keeps his ties."

"I endure his ties and his unoccupied shirts," declared a young and baby faced matron, "but his cigars and all his smoking apparatus drive me to the brink. Not that I particularly object to a nice, neat row of cigars, or even a freshly lighted one, but think of the horrid, smelly ashes that incumber the carpets! Think of the smoke that lingers forever in the curtains, and the vile smelling cigar stub that is always present, and that is so distressing to the nerves of the nice and the neat."

"Well, really," said Mrs. Penton, "it is a pity that there is not some one here to speak for the other side. Don't you suppose that our belongings, our jewels and baubles sometimes annoy our husbands? Surely, our infinite variety of possessions, our hairpins and hatpins, our veils and laces, our beads and buckles must have their effect upon nervous men."

"But we have nothing that corresponds to the bad smelling cigar stubs," protested the baby faced matron.

"We have our perfumes and our sachets," declared Mrs. Penton, "and you know that to some men the odor of perfume is intolerable. As for sachet powder, I had to give that up early in my married life, because it made Mr. Penton ill, and now I dislike it as much as he does."

"He ought to have married the woman who couldn't endure the sight of a man's clothes in her closet," laughed Mrs. Troy. "What a sweet time they would have had together! But isn't it ridiculous to make such a fuss over little things, when life is so full of big issues?"

"Well, it's a truth as old as the hills," sighed the small matron, "that it's the little things that cause all the trouble." Chicago Daily News.

A FORMER TODD COUNTIAN IN LIME LIGHT OF POLITICS.

(Todd County Progress.)

The race for Commonwealths Attorney in the Third Judicial District of Kentucky, composed of the counties of Christian, Trigg, Lyon and Calloway, seems to be warming up, even though the contest does not come off until Aug. 1915.

We note with pleasure, from reliable sources, that J. B. Allensworth, of Hopkinsville, is a candidate, and all indications point to his being the next Democratic nominee.

The editor of this paper has known Mr. Allensworth since he first entered upon his career as a lawyer in this, his native county, where he practiced until he removed to Hopkinsville in 1892.

Mr. Allensworth by hard work has gradually forged to the front, and now ranks with the best lawyers in the State.

He was born and reared in this county, not far from Trenton, where he grew to manhood on the farm of his widowed mother, and helped her to rear and educate his younger brothers and sisters.

He came from the best blood, his ancestry having achieved distinction in the ministry and in the professions.

He is known here and where he resides, as an upright, clean Christian gentleman, and the good wishes of his many friends in his native county are with him in this and all other high and lofty aspiration.

Here is to you J. B. and may the good people of your district think of you as we do with a handsome and merited endorsement.

QUITE SO.

At a club frequented by doctors the discussion came up recently whether a person could live without a brain. During the discourse one of the doctors said: "When I was practising medicine in Indiana a remarkable case came under my supervision. A man, while out hunting, had leaned upon his shotgun and the weapon had gone off accidentally, making a large wound in his head just above the ear. The brain was laid bare and in bringing the patient to the hospital a handful of the gray matter leaked out. He was trepan-ned and finally recovered, his mental faculties apparently as good as ever."

"Your story is interesting," interrupted an auditor, "but it sounds to me somewhat inconsistent."

"Why so?" questioned the narrator.

"Because," answered the other doctor, "if he had ever had a handful of brains he wouldn't have leaned on the gun."—National Monthly.

A STEADY TALKER.

rupted ravishment."

FAME AND OTHERWISE.

"Every time I see grandfather's sword I want to go to war."

"Well?"

"But every time I notice grandfather's wooden leg I cool down."

quired:

like gas," exclaimed the irate patient.
"Do you think I'm going to have you

TO REMEMBER WHEN IRONING

Matters of Consequence If One Would Do Good Work and Preserve the Clothes Handled.

First of all the irons must be immaculately clean and suited to the article to be ironed. Irons come now in all sizes, for all purposes.

Heat the irons slowly, but have them very hot before starting, even if they must be cooled later. Try them on a soft clean cloth.

The ironing sheet also must be clean. For fine lingerie cover the ordinary ironing sheet with thin material; for embroidery and lace use a Turkish towel, pinned tightly around the board. To stiffen articles slightly without starch rub them on the wrong side with warm water and horax.

To clean the irons if starch sticks rub them over fine emery paper, then with a little paraffin wrapped in muslin. If an iron becomes rusty scrub it with hot water and soap, then rub it very lightly with lard. Wipe it carefully with absorbent cotton to remove all traces of the lard.

Never allow irons to get red hot, as it takes the temper out. Do not put a hot iron in water to cool it; stand it on one side for a few minutes.

It is unwise to put irons directly over the gas flame, as it spoils the iron. In the absence of a special device for holding them use an asbestos mat.

When possible colored goods should be ironed on the wrong side, then pressed on the right. This brings out the coloring. All-wool underwear ought not to be ironed, as ironing causes it to shrink.

Cut some rather thick slices from the remains of a leg of mutton, remove the fat and skin and trim them so that they are the same size. About an hour before they are required place them in a deep dish with a few slices of onion between the pieces of meat. Sprinkle a little black pepper and nutmeg over them and cover with oil and vinegar mixed together in the proportion of three tablespoonfuls of oil to one of vinegar. Season a small quantity of fine white breadcrumbs with celery salt and pepper, and mix together with onion and minced parsley. Wipe the slices of meat when they are taken from the pickle, dip them into beaten egg and cover them thickly with the prepared crumbs. Allow the crumbs to harden on the slices of meat for ten or fifteen minutes and fry quickly in plenty of boiling fat. Drain and serve with splash of cabbage and a piquant sauce.

Braised Veal.

Take a piece of shoulder weighing five pounds. Have bone removed and tie up meat to make it firm. Put piece of butter size of half an egg, together with a few shavings of onion, into a kettle and let get hot. Salt and pepper the veal and put into kettle, cover tightly and put over a medium fire until meat is brown on both sides, turning it occasionally. Then set kettle on back of stove where it will simmer slowly for about two and one-half hours. Before setting meat on back of stove see if the juice of the meat, together with the butter, makes gravy enough, and if not, add a little hot water. When gravy is cold it will be like jelly. Serve gravy hot with hot meat or cold with cold meat.

Prune Kringles.

Half pound dough, one teaspoonful each of butter and sugar kneaded into it; chop six or eight prunes in four tablespoonfuls sugar, chop first the meat of three or four prunes very fine; mix, shape the dough into sticks the size of the little finger, roll in the prunes, bake in oblong rings.

Sugar kringles are made in the same way, substituting 12 dozen bleached and chopped almonds for the prunes; roll the sticks rather smaller; make oblong rings with one end crossing at the middle to the opposite side.

Cabbage Salad.

Chop cabbage fine. Salad dressing, put together in order given: One cupful sugar, one teaspoonful mustard; mix cupful sugar, one teaspoonful mustard; mix thoroughly; add small piece of butter; cream as for cake; one egg beaten, one-half scant cupful milk or cream; beat all together; lastly one-half scant cupful vinegar.

This salad dressing can be made in two minutes, as it needs no cooking and will keep as long as you wish fine on lettuce.

Linoleum Polish.

Odds and ends of candles will make an inexpensive polish for linoleum. Use about equal parts of candle scraps and common turpentine. Place in a jar and stand where it is warm, until the grease is quite melted, then allow to cool, where it will be soft and creamy. Use with a soft cloth and polish with a second soft cloth. A little of the grease will go a long way.

Palatable Meat Loaf.

Leftover meat may be chopped and mixed with leftover potatoes. Seasoning and a raw egg are added and the mixture formed into a loaf, which is covered with crumbs and baked with frequent basting of hot water until it is brown. The result is a real treat.

On the Dining Tables.

A piece of waxed paper placed under the centerpiece on a polished table will prevent the linen from adhering to the table in hot weather, as well as prevent a stain from cold water or an over-filled vase or rose bowl.

Church, State and Poor.

A book on "The Church, the State and the Poor" has been written by an English vicar. The book is comprehensive, tracing the subject of preformation days. The author regrets that during the growth of collectivism, under which he classifies what is called "Christian socialism," the church has trusted too much to the state to better the conditions among the poor. Now there is a revival of interest in the welfare of the poor on the part of the church. The writer's contention is that a firm belief in the Christian creed is the only inspiration and guide to any effort to solve the social problem.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

We call your attention to this fact that after carefully looking over the names of this PROHIBITION DEPARTMENT, one or more of which have attacked the character and motives of those who oppose PROHIBITION, that none of these names appear on the tablet of fame, with WASHINGTON, JEFFERSON, ADAMS, HENRY and LINCOLN.

Should we not consider very seriously what they have told us before the very foundation of the government they have founded has been destroyed?

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

GEO. WASHINGTON, Father of his Country, "FIRST in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his COUNTRYMEN," owned and operated a distillery and willed it to his nephew at his death. This is a matter of record in his Virginia home.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, who wrote the DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, owned and operated a Brewery, and said "OUR LEGISLATORS are not sufficiently apprised of the rightful limits of their powers, that their true office is to declare and enforce only our NATURAL RIGHTS and duties and take none of these from us." "No man has a natural right to commit aggression on the equal rights of another and this is all from which the law ought to restrain him."

JOHN ADAMS, one of the signers of the DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, owned and operated a Brewery.

PATRICK HENRY, was once a Bartender, and gave to his Countrymen this epigram "GIVE ME LIBERTY, OR GIVE ME DEATH."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, the great Emancipator and Statesman, when a member of the Illinois Legislature, moved to table a resolution for State-wide prohibition and voted against local option, and also said "PROHIBITION is a species of intemperance within itself, for it goes beyond the bounds of reason in the attempt to control a man's appetite by legislation." A license was also issued to Wm. F. Berry and Abraham Lincoln while he was living at New Salem, Pike County, Ill., March 6th, 1833, by the County Commissioner's Court, to keep a Hotel and Barroom in said town for one year. He also wrote "Too much DENUNCIATION OF THE DRAM SELLERS AND DRAM DRINKERS IS INDULGED IN." It is impolitic, because it is not much in the nature of a man to be driven to anything; still less to be driven about that which is exclusively his own business, and least of all where such driving is to be submitted to at the expense and pecuniary interest or burning appetite." He further said "A PROHIBITION LAW STRIKES A BLOW AT THE VERY PRINCIPLES ON WHICH OUR GOVERNMENT WAS FOUNDED."

We do not question the Liberty or rights of any man, woman or child in Christian County, but we do question the right of a set of Prohibition fanatics to attack the citizenship of Christian County by such methods as have been employed in this campaign as vilification and intimidation. Has The constitution of this country guaranteed you the right to think and speak, or has it guaranteed the prohibition department in Hopkinsville, the right to intimidate, vilify, and even threaten a boy-cott on the business interests of this city and county?

A HIGH JUDICIAL AUTHORITY ON PROHIBITION!

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

Disregarding political affiliations, no one is prepared to gainsay that former President William Howard Taft has a clearer insight into the cause and effect of law than any other private citizen. While occupying the White House, he was by national consent, called the "Judicial President" because of his profound comprehension of the origin and fruits of law. Read what he says concerning Prohibition:

"Nothing is more foolish than to adopt a law which cannot be enforced. This is illustrated by the failure of attempts that have been made to enforce a prohibition law in communities where local sentiment is opposed to such a policy."

The legal mind of former President Taft recognizes the fact that a law which does not agree with the views of the people for whom it is intended to apply is non-enforceable, except under an absolute monarchical form of government.

For nearly 140 years the people have been accustomed to govern themselves. It is perfectly natural that they should resent the attempted enforcement of laws with which they are not in sympathy. This is a free government of a free people and not a monarchy. The days of witchcraft are past. Under the form of government that the Revolutionary heroes fought to adopt is the recognized basic principle that the prejudices of one class of people shall not be FORCED upon another class of people—this is a government of all the people, with a freedom of thought and action. No class of American citizens are wards of the other classes unless they are insane.

Paris Ready For Siege.

It takes courage for a French government to transfer the capital from Paris in the face of a hostile army; yet this was plainly the wisest step that the authorities should have taken.

Paris may or may not be subjected to a siege. That depends upon the success of the German armies in their operations against the allies. There can be no siege of Paris until the allied army is captured or destroyed or isolated. Not Paris but the allied army must remain the objective of the Germans, precisely as Lee's army and not Richmond was the objective of Grant.

In 1870 the siege of Paris was made possible only by the surrender at Sedan and the shutting up of Bazaine's great army within the fort without which there could have been no siege of Paris, and there can be no siege this time until the German forces are able to win corresponding victories.

In 1870 the siege found the Provisional French Government trapped in Paris, with its communications cut off. Not merely Paris was isolated from France, but the Government itself was isolated. The results of Gambetta's balloon exploit showed what might have been done had there been a strong French Government at Bordeaux to organize new armies.

To abandon Paris as the seat of government was wisdom in a situation like this. The city ceases to be a capital, and becomes a fortress. If Paris is besieged, it is the fortress that is besieged and not the Government. No political problem remains to complicate the problem.

To remove the Government from Paris may be a heavy blow to French pride, but when a nation is fighting for its life, pride is about the last thing it can afford to bother about.—New York World.

WITH EYES CLOSED

By REX G. POST.

(Copyright.)
Scovers was a disappointment to the Kid. After six months as a "sub" in a little local station, it seemed to him that promotion to his first "OS" job ought to mean a spacious station, a constantly clicking key, and a rush at the ticket window. But Scovers was only an abandoned box car and a "bonrd." And to add to the Kid's chagrin, he was only the night man. That he was to take the night man's place he knew when he accepted the position, but ambition to plunge into the whirling world of the railroad had been irresistibly urgent, and he accepted.

The Kid was without companions during the dull, dreary hours of the night—hours to which the mourning wailing of the coyotes lent no cheer. Watson came on at 6 and left at the same hour in the evening. Occasionally he would pause to exchange a few commonplaces with the Kid—usually, he hurried to the camp where he lived. The nights were long and lonesome; part of the day was spent in repose.

He became wearied of the monotony after a few weeks and began to spend a few hours of the daylight in hunting the rabbits which abounded in the surrounding country. It was his only diversion, and it gradually grew upon him until he was filling the days with it and losing the sleep which was absolutely indispensable if he was to remain vigilantly on guard during his shift.

The Kid sat looking out of the window in the side of the box car and wondered how much longer he could endure the oppressive humdrum.

No. 65 went by at midnight carrying a green. He reported her passage and turned to his reading. The long melancholy blast of the whistle echoed in his ears long after the train had flashed by with its golden squares of light. It diverted him from his book for a moment, but his eyes slowly returned to the page, and he read on.

Suddenly he was gripped by the dread that something unusual had occurred. It seemed to him that he had been dozing. He started as second 63 roared by.

"I'll wait and then put her down," he muttered drowsily.

Again he was overwhelmed by a subtle consciousness that all was not as it should be.

He listened as the sounder abruptly broke out in a harsh staccato.

"V-V-V-S-V-V-S-31," ticked the instrument.

He stirred.

"Where have you been—la the hay?" came the query. "OS."

He hastily "OS'd" second 63 and closed the key.

"Third 63 by yet?" the sounder asked.

The Kid opened his key.

"Not yet," he replied.

"OK, put her in the siding for second 73."

Landed with fast freight, second 73 was waiting at Hawk, about twenty-five miles east of Scovers, for the right of way. The Kid clicked the order to Hawk, and shortly afterward the wire told him that second 73 had started.

Again the fear of error and disaster assailed the Kid. He could not resist it. He picked up the train-sheet and scrutinized it. He rose unsteadily to his feet, horror gripped in every line of his pale, drawn face.

"Third 63 went by and I didn't put her down," he gasped.

It meant wreck, death, and disgrace. He had slept, he knew it now, and the truth of it was seared into his mind. The trains would collide about ten miles west of Hawk. No stations intervened—it could not possibly be averted. In a neglectful moment the tide of circumstances had swept aside the placid current of his life and turned it into a dizzying turmoil.

Should he report her? For a moment he vacillated. They would know why it had happened. He need not admit the horrible truth now.

"Third 63 yet?" the key broke in terrifyingly.

With the vacillation had come weakness.

"Not yet," the Kid answered.

He sank into his chair and buried his face in his hands. Often, before he became a telegrapher, he had wondered how feels the man who makes the fatal blunder and hurls a train-load of passengers into the infinite.

It had seemed to him that it must be crushing, maddening—the end of all peace. Now he knew how really dire it was.

He reached for the key. He would do what small human thing he could—confess.

Suddenly there was a roaring in his ears. His form straightened in the chair and his head went back as he gazed with staring, unbelieving eyes at third 63 rumbled by with a gleam of light.

He rubbed his eyes and looked stupidly at her tail-lights as they swept from his vision.

He sat down and thought long and seriously. Third 63 was safe. There had been no order on second 73. He had dreamed that he had fallen asleep—a dream that was a strange mixture of fancy and truth.

CASE OF BETTY ROSS

By JULIA GOUGH.

Young Gilmore tore the program into bits and cast them into the grate.

"Why did you do that?" asked Ruth. "I always keep my programs to remind me of good times."

"I don't require a program to remind me of a good time with you, Ruth," declared young Gilmore, "and I find it wise to destroy all—well, all documents in evidences."

"Why, what do you mean, Billy?"

"I mean that there's no use in agitating my sisters any more than is unavoidable. If they should happen to discover an afternoon concert program in my room they would ask at once: 'Who is the girl?' They knew very well that music alone wouldn't call me forth on a Sunday afternoon."

"Nonsense! They know you love music."

"Yes, they do; but they suspect me of loving—well, something else even more."

Ruth made an effort to look supremely bored and succeeded so well that Young Gilmore settled into an almost sullen silence.

"Your sisters take a good deal of interest in you, don't they?" asked Ruth casually after a few minutes.

"Interest! That's putting it mildly. They are fairly ignited with curiosity about my affairs. I never leave the house on an evening but one or both of them ask me where I'm going and whom I'm going with. I sometimes marvel at their persistency in the face of what might be called inglorious defeat, for I never give them the least satisfaction."

"I think that's perfectly horrid of you. I should expect you to tell me something about your affairs if you were my brother."

"I don't aspire to that honor. There is another position that I prefer to—"

"What do you tell your sisters when they ask you whom you've been with?"

"I invariably tell them Betty Ross."

"I should think they'd hate you."

"On the contrary, they appear to like me pretty well. In fact, I modestly believe I'm rather more likable than you seem to think."

"Silly!"

"You telephoned my house this morning, didn't you?"

"Yes, I wished to tell you that we ought to start early for the concert. How did you know it was 1?"

"My sister Rose said that the Betty Ross with the sweet voice had asked for me, so, of course, I knew it was you. Besides, there aren't many girls who have me on their telephone calling list."

"Well," pouted Ruth, "I don't phone you very often—never unless it's something really important."

"I know you don't—hardly once in a blue moon. But, just the same, my sisters have learned your voice. They know your writing, too." Gilmore chuckled. "Gracie says it's a good thing I'm an architect or I wouldn't be able to decipher your Gothic hand."

"I don't puzzle you very frequently with specimens of my chirography."

"Not half often enough. I wish you'd try me with a nice little 'Yes.' I venture to say that I could read it without half trying."

"Silly!"

"Do you know, I believe you and my sisters would agree perfectly."

"What makes you think so?"

"Because, like you, they're always calling me silly."

"Pooh!"

"Well, last evening, for instance, when I got home to dinner Rose and Gracie asked me in an excited duet, 'Whom were you walking with on Michigan avenue today?' I inquired how they knew I was walking with anybody, and they said that a cousin of ours—who takes a remarkable interest in me, too—had telephoned them that she had seen me walking with a girl at noon. My companion was described to them as wearing a blue silk ratine, whatever that may be, with Bulgarian trimmings. I asked the girls if they were absolutely sure about the Bulgarian trimmings, and when they declared that they were I thought a moment and then said I believed it must have been Betty Ross. They both exclaimed that I was perfectly silly."

"And so you were," agreed Ruth as she gazed at the gay Bulgarian collar and cuffs of the new spring jacket she had thrown off when they came in from the concert. "I don't see, Billy, why you don't tell them the truth."

"If you'd let me know where I stand with Betty Ross, I'd be only too glad to tell them," declared young Gilmore, fervently. "It's up to you."

She Favored the Queen.

Two sisters while visiting Ireland in Victoria's time got into conversation one day with a tenant of their hostess. One of the girls, who was quite stout, asked the old woman if she would have known them for sisters.

"Well," was the answer, "ye look alike, but yer sister's slender, while you, miss—well, you favor the quango."

Explanation.

"Mamma, I know what makes that," said snail Sadie, who was watching the lightning flashes during a summer shower.

"What, dear?"

"The angels are scratching matches on the clouds," was the reply.

"THE MOST IMPORTANT MEETING EVER HELD IN THE TABERNACLE."—R. E. Cooper, Pres., H. B. M. A.

The words forming the caption of this article are those of Mr. R. E. Cooper, President of the Hopkinsville Business Men's Association, as he introduced Rev. Geo. R. Stuart Tuesday night at Union Tabernacle. They are his estimate of the gathering to which the noted evangelist and lecturer at that time spoke.

Long before the hour for the lecture of Mr. Stuart, the large structure had begun to receive the people from neighboring towns and all parts of the county, as well as from the city. Many colored people were among them. At the opening of the exercises the great building was full of as representative an audience as ever gathered in this county. Especially impressive was the order, quiet and evident thoughtfulness of the vast assembly as it gathered and as it waited for the program to be commenced.

The Campaign Choir, led by Mr. Bailey Walker, sang fine old hymns. And when they sang "Old Christian's Going Dry" to the tune of "Bringing In The Sheaves," the atmosphere of the place was electrical with suppressed emotion and vital purpose.

An opening prayer was led by Rev. C. M. Thompson. It was a most fitting appeal for divine help and guidance, simply, strongly phrased. The distinguished minister of Christ did not forget to pray for our fellow-townsmen who are engaged in the sale of alcohol, that they might be spared and brought to turn from their present business to serve the Great King.

When Mr. Cooper came from the large company of business men which together with the choir filled the ample platform to introduce Mr. Stuart, he was greeted with hearty applause. And never did the dignified and forceful man of affairs more commend himself to his fellow-citizens than he did Tuesday night in his presentation of the speaker. He said many great men had spoken to many great assemblies in the Tabernacle, but that of those none had been so revered and beloved as Rev. Sam P. Jones and Rev. George R. Stuart. One he said was now immortal, the other was happily with us and would speak to us.

Mr. Stuart's appearance in the aisle as he went to the platform had been greeted with enthusiastic applause. He received a second ovation as he came forward to speak.

No newspaper report could do justice to the speech of Mr. Stuart or the effect produced by it. It was filled with a rich variety of appeal. Reason was appealed to. Consciences were probed. Heroism was invoked. Honesty was challenged. The sense of humor was stirred until it expressed itself in waves of laughter. Tenderness toward the hurts of poor broken humanity was evoked.

Nothing said by the orator called out so enthusiastic and so prolonged applause as his exhortation of the local newspapers for their failure to take one side or the other in the local option battle here and for the readiness to take money for space from both sides at once. He said if they persisted in this course a paper should be founded here which would have convictions upon great moral questions.

He paid his respects in his own inimitable way to the timid friend of prohibition—the friend who is for it but speaks softly of his friendship, whispering of it behind his hand as it were.

He punctured bladders of falsehood and pretense with keen thrusts and demolished fallacies with sledge-hammer blows.

He opposed facts to liquorite fancies as to the effect of prohibition upon business and social order.

The great voice of the speaker inquired "Who knows who are the Campaign Committee of the Saloon here?"

He struck telling and deadly blows against the liquorite notion that anarchy is liberty. He said Jehovahat Sirai made the most of His law prohibitive—"Thou shalt not."

After speaking an hour and a half or more to an audience, which was profoundly attentive to all he said, he announced that he would complete his speech to-day at 1:30 o'clock and then pronounced the benediction, saying "The Lord be with you and bless you and make you right and help you to do right."

Another convincing appeal was made to the night's notable meeting by the business men on the platform. With characteristic disregard of the truth, emissaries of the saloon have been going about and telling the uninformed that "the business men of the town are against prohibition." The men on the platform convicted these agents of alcohol before the whole county of a slander of the business men of Hopkinsville. And it was very noticeable that tobacco men are in the front of our battle against strong drink. Here is the answer to the absurd story that the tobacco interest is afraid of prohibition.

Mr. Stuart spoke again in the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon.

WHAT BUSINESS MEN THINK OF PROHIBITION.

A mass meeting will be held to-night at 7:30 o'clock at the Court House to hear some business men tell what they think of prohibition. Business men testified in the Court House on Monday and gave to a large audience of our people then some facts. To-night more such facts will be given to our people. Any man who cares to know the truth about this great public interest rather than to follow the cunning misrepresentations of the most unscrupulous, oppressive and hateful Trust in the world should attend this mass meeting.

All citizens white and colored are invited to this meeting. Ladies are especially invited.—Advertisement.

Preservative of Youth.

None of the nature studies requires much money or time. A cheap illustrated guidebook, an opera glass, and, if possible, some walks and talks with an expert, and you will learn almost immediately to identify a score or more of flowers, or birds, or constellations, or mushrooms, and you will have found a hobby on which you may ride away from Death. Try it, young men, lest you grow old. Try it, old men, before you grow tired. Escape into the open from these narrow indoor days and learn the way to where the wild folk dwell. In their land you will find the help of the hills, and hope wide as the world, and strength, and youth, and happiness. Try it.—Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Lippincott's Magazine.

Only Our Own Land.

(Mr. Watterson in Courier Journal.) The attitude of neutrality adopted by the United States is not only eminently wise and proper, but it is supported by many considerations of public policy and self interest along with international comity and duty.

The popular sentiment of the country is almost a unit against the kaiser. But this does not imply any lack of good will for the Germans, or love for the English, or leaning to the French. It means first, that the kaiser could have averted the war and did not, and, second, that we are unalterably opposed to absolutism as represented by the governments both of Germany and Austria. It is well to keep this in mind.

England is the one country in the world which under any condition or circumstance might buck against us and give us the fight of our life, or a run for our money. There is not now, much, if any, menace in England's alliance with Japan. But if England should issue out of the war victor and undertake a pro-Japanese policy in the Orient—the substitution of Japan for Germany in Samoa, for example—right then and there we fight. Let there be no mistake on that point.

Lying alongside us is Canada. England could harass us on land as she undoubtedly would harass us at sea, especially if we acquire much of a merchant marine. Japan might easily become a pretext. If Germany comes out victor republicanism is arrested in Europe and imperiled everywhere. If the alliance wins we shall have doubly to look to our ships and our markets. In no event, therefore, can we hold ourselves indifferent.

We do not look, however, with apprehension on the future. We are the ascending, not on the descending scale of national development. The destiny of the United States of America will carry the American Union to a relation to the rest of the world not attained by Rome at the height of her prowess and glory.

No foreign power will be likely ever to risk a war with us. Indeed, the whole universe will be so weary, so worn out and sick of war at the end of this bloody conflict as will end the strife of nations for a century, if not for all time. Already men stand everywhere aghast.

Meanwhile we hold by our guns and keep our powder dry, ready for whatever emergencies arise. Our personal sympathies are quite as much with the German people—victims of arbitrary power—as with the English people and the French people, drawn into the war against their better judgment and their real wishes. But we are a nation aloof and apart.

The true American loves no country except his own. Whenever the time comes we shall be prepared to meet England, if the need should be, whenever England chooses to set the mark; in the Dominion, in China, in Europe, or on the high seas. For us, one flag, one country, one destiny, down with autocracy and arbitrary power in Germany, in Austria and in Russia; up with the standard of freedom, democracy, republicanism, all of us joining Baltimore, in her centenary refrain that—"The Star Spangled Banner, oh long may it wave, O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

MAKE KITCHEN WORK EASIER

Cleaning of Pots and Kettles Need Not Be the Bugbear That It Is for So Many.

It is quite possible to go into many kitchens the first thing in the morning and find an alarming array of dirty pots and pans on which the remains of food cooked the night before has hardened and become encrusted on the inside. This means an enormous amount of really unnecessary work in the morning. Now, though it may not be possible for the cook, after a late dinner with guests attending, to set to work and to clean thoroughly all the utensils used, yet it is possible for her, as each is used, to fill it three parts full of boiling water, putting in with this a small lump of soda. Then after dinner is served all that it necessary is to empty the contents, rinse the pans well to remove all scraps of food left on the sides, dry them and hang them in the draft where the air can reach them.

Next morning when the girl has more time, she can have some hot water and soda ready in a large dishpan.
Then the pans may be dipped into this and rubbed off thoroughly with a cloth soaped and dipped in fine sand; then they should be well rinsed and dried and put back in their places.

Should a pan have been allowed to burn and there are still some burnt fragments clinging to it, a little soda water should be boiled up in it until all the fragments are loosened and then the pot should be scoured.

RICE DUMPLINGS A DELICACY

Cooked With Apples and Served With Cream or Other Sauce They Make Ideal Dessert.

Pick and wash a half pound of rice and boil it gently in one quart of water till it becomes dry, keeping the pot well covered and not stirring it.
Then take it off the fire and spread it out to cool on the bottom of an inverted sieve, loosening the grains lightly with a fork, that all the moisture may evaporate. Pare half a dozen apples, and take out the cores.
Then fill each cavity with marmalade or with lemon and sugar. Cover every apple all over with a thick coating of the boiled rice. Tie up each in a separate cloth and put them into a pot of cold water. They will require about an hour and a quarter before they begin to boil, perhaps longer.
Turn them out in a large dish, and be careful in doing so not to break the dumplings. Serve them with cream sauce, or with butter, sugar and nutmeg beaten together.

To Make Okra Soup.

Okra soup, or gumbie soup, can be made in a good many ways. For one kind make a rich stock from beef and veal bones strain and skim. Add to a quart of the stock a pint of okra cut in small pieces and stewed with a pint of tomatoes and a pint of water until tender. Put in three or four teaspoonfuls of rice and simmer until it is tender. Then serve very hot.
This soup, of course, does not equal chicken gumbie soup, which is one of the most delicious soups made, but which takes four or five hours in the making and calls for chicken, beef, okra, potato, onion, rice, tomato, green pepper, bacon and several other ingredients.

Mutton Roll.

Pass one pound of lean cooked mutton and a small quantity of lean bacon through a fine mincer and place in a mixing bowl. Add half a teaspoonful of fine bread crumbs, a little finely minced onions, and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Whip one egg until light, mix together with the prepared meat, and roll into an oblong cake on a floured board. Tie this roll in a piece of buttered muslin and stew in thick brown sauce for an hour.

Lamb and Macaroni Scallop.

Cook one cupful macaroni broken into small pieces in boiling water, salted until tender. Strain, pour over it two quarts cold water and drain again.
Add three cupfuls of tomato sauce and put in half a buttered baking dish.
Cover with sliced lamb, then add the remaining macaroni. Cover with crumbs, dot with bits of butter and bake until brown.

Rhubarb Sponge.

Take a small sponge cake, cut off the top, scoop out the center and fill with stewed rhubarb. Replace the top, cover the whole with custard and leave to set. A few crystallized cherries stuck about the cake make the dish look very pretty. The scooped out portion can be used to make a rhubarb trifle for the next day.

About Grease Marks on Silk.

To remove grease marks, take a lump of magnesite and rub it well on the spot, letting it dry, then brush the powder off.

When Stewing Fruit.

When sweetening a fruit, less sugar is needed if a pinch of carbonate of soda is added to the fruit when stewing it.

For Your Kitchen Range.

Add six or eight drops of turpentine to your stove polish and you will find it much easier to get good results.

About Spots on China.

To remove tea stains from china, dampen the spots with water and rub liberally with table salt.

WANDERINGS OF A WATCH

Story Told as Simple Truth is Somewhat of a Strain on the Most Credulous Mind.

No writer of fiction could have invented a stranger story than that of the curious adventures of a watch, which Capt. George Nichols, an old-time Salem shipmaster and merchant, used to tell as the literal truth.

At Manila in 1802, says Captain Nichols, I employed a Mr. Kerr to assist me in my business. He took a great fancy to my watch, and proposed to give me his own watch with some indigo to boot in exchange for it. We find fixed upon a quintal and a half of indigo, worth then more than $160, and I kept my chain and seals. The indigo I sold for $130 more than the original cost of my watch, and besides, I got a watch that proved to be a better timepiece than mine had been.

Some twelve years or more after this I was in company with Capt.
William Lander of Salem, when he took from his pocket a gold watch.

"That watch," said I, "looks exactly like the one I sold to Mr. Kerr in Manila."

"I know the whole history of that watch," replied Mr. Lander. "I was in Manila after you left, when Mr.
Kerr told me that he had sold your watch to a sea captain from New York or Philadelphia, and that in passing Aguilas Bank, near the Cape of Good Hope, the captain accidentally lost it overboard. Two or three days after, as another vessel was passing the bank, one of the crew caught a fish, and on opening it found a gold watch. He carried the watch to Calcutta, and sold it to Captain Blackler of Marblehead, from whom I got it."

This was Captain Lander's story, and I have no doubt that the watch taken from the fish was the same that Mr. Kerr had from me—

THE FADDIST.

Are you a faddist? If not, you are an exceptional person and too conservative for the good of your health. Fads are the spice of life.
And that is the main reason why the majority of us are faddists. We constantly look for and instantly seize the latest fad that comes along and contribute our share of energy toward making it the prevailing craze of the hour. . . . We readily and willingly succumb to the newest ragtime song, the newest dance, the newest breakfast food, the newest outdoor amusement, the newest bit of slang or anything new just so it is new. It is as easy to relinquish an old fad for a new one as it is to breathe. The faddist gets a great deal of pleasure out of life.—

CROWDED WITH RESERVISTS

Men Called to Colors From South and Central America Can't Get Passage.

Panama, Sept. 8.—War in Europe has brought to Isthmus hundreds of reservists of practically all the nations involved, called to the colors from South and Central America, but since the first movement when a few French and Germans obtained passage home, there has been no chance for them to get across the Atlantic. Germans, Austrians, Hungarians, Frenchmen and Russians, are all making themselves at home in Panama City and Colon.

In one hotel in Panama there are nearly 100 Frenchmen waiting for a ship that will take them home to fight. Close to the table they sit at for meals, is a table surrounded by 25 Germans, equally anxious to get home but locally there is no trouble. No one knows when a ship will be available. The French line will have no vessel in port for a long time. German ships are no longer sailing out of Colon, and the British ships have refused to transport the men, even for double passage money.

The War on Tuberculosis.

A Philadelphia physician expresses the opinion that tuberculosis is not contagious or infectious, but is due to "general unhealthy surroundings."

While the statement will not be generally accepted, it must be conceded that some of the Philadelphia physician's ideas as to the best methods of combating tuberculosis are altogether sensible. The prevention of consumption, he believes, should consist of efforts to improve the slum districts of cities, towns and hamlets; of work which enforces the laws of "general, personal, domestic and public sanitation." Shacks and hovels, he says, should be torn down; people should be prevented from living in cellars and in overcrowded and ill-ventilated houses; proper food, clothing and shelter should be provided for invalids, and for the poorer working classes; convalescence from serious illness or accidents or from what seems a trivial cold or cough should be supervised by careful medical skill.

The New York Medical Times sums up the whole programme in a sentence when it says: "The sane management of consumption resolves itself into the sane management of our pressing social problems." Such a course of procedure, as the Philadelphia physician suggests would not only reduce the mortality from tuberculosis, but would eliminate various other diseases which take heavy toll of humanity. Sickness abounds wherever there are unfavorable living conditions.

If poverty could be cured many other ills would vanish. If sanitation were general the world would be happier and healthier. It may be that the anti-tuberculosis campaign is not broad enough, but it is covering a good deal of territory and is accomplishing much that is beneficial. The world was not built in a day and cannot be reformed overnight.—Courier-Journal.

Lincoln Beachey, World's Champion Aerialist, Will Fly at Kentucky State Fair

RAIN or shine, wind or calm, Lincoln Beachey, who is said to "beat the birds" in his above the clouds maneuvers, will give two amazing and sensational exhibitions on Saturday, Sept. 19, the closing day of the Fair. Beachey will fly upside down, loop the loop, make 2,000 foot spirals and race ten feet above the earth. His feats are without a parallel among bird men, and the Beachey engagement will be the "thriller" of the entire Fair.

CALLS FOR ONLY ONE EGG

This Cooked Cream Used for Cake Makes Substitute for Those More Expensive.

One cupful of milk, 1½ teaspoonfuls of cornstarch, one-half cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of butter, one egg, flavor to taste. Scald the milk, add sugar and butter, then the cornstarch mixed with a little cold milk. When thickened pour on slightly beaten egg and spread between a square of the above cake split in two. Leave until cream soaks well into the cake. Powder the top with icing sugar and serve.

To this cream may be added nuts chopped, half a cupful of pecans chopped, or it may be flavored in various ways. A handful of filberts cooked in a cranial of sugar and then ground makes a most flavorful and delicious flavoring for this or for a richer cooked cream. Bananas, or even oranges, if it is to be served within a few hours, may be added.

This cake may be used as a quite satisfactory substitute for the elegant and expensive Savoy, the Genoese, etc., and whites of egg only instead of the whole egg may be used in making it. It can be put together with fruit syrups, used for trifles, and with all the compounds of whipped cream and fruit.

TROUBLE BETWEEN GERMAN AND FRANCE.

A wise treatment of the Balkan problem would have averted the present war. But it would not have ended the overweening curse of militarism, nor removed the distrust and fear upon which militarism feeds and which it naturally promotes. The beginning of the end of European militarism should have come about with a good understanding between Germany and France. Such an understanding would have been arrived at many years ago, if Germany had been wise enough to reopen the Alsace-Lorraine question in the spirit of generosity and at the same time of simple common sense. Everybody who is wise has known this; but pride and arrogance too often blind nations, even as they blind individuals, so that they miss the plain path of wisdom and safety. —From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for September.

Light From the Earth.

The darkest part of the sky is always aglow. The earth itself gives off a lot of light. Scientists of the Franklin Institute have measured this earth light and have found that it is of the order of one-tenth part of the intensity of a star of the first order of magnitude. It is attributed, at least partially, to a permanent aurora borealis which is revealed by the characteristic green ray observed on obscure nights in the whole heavens.

FOR NUTS AND SMALL FRUITS

Delicate Confection, Expensive to Buy, May Quite Easily Be Prepared at Home.

Glaze nuts are expensive to buy, but like small fruits they may be prepared at home. It is necessary to be a little careful the first time the process is tried.

Have the nuts, grapes, raisins, cherries or berries ready. In a clean agate saucepan put one full pint of granulated sugar, a good gill of cold water and boil until it will thread. Add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar or lemon juice; boil again and remove from the fire the instant the syrup changes color. Pour it into the farina boiler, which is waiting with hollering water in the outside part. Remove to the table and dip the nuts or fruit in and out as quickly as possible. Try not to coat them very thickly. Drain them on greased paraffin paper.

Another way is to grease with butter generously a platter. Pour the hollering mixture on it and stick nuts or fruit through it. Cool and then break the mass apart with a small hammer.

Fish Chowder.

Wash a pound of fresh whitefish and cut into inch squares. Pare and dice two large potatoes and mince a large white onion. Put a layer of potatoes in the chowder pot, then a sprinkling of onion, minced or powdered thyme, a little celery salt, plain salt and white pepper. When all the materials are put in as directed, add a pint of cold water. Cover and cook gently for twenty minutes without disturbing. Heat a pint of milk in a double boiler, and when fish and potatoes are done, turn in the milk. Season to taste if not enough salt and pepper has been put in at first. Serve at once. A pint of stewed tomatoes may be added before the milk, if desired; a pinch of baking soda and a teaspoonful of sugar added to the tomatoes, to prevent danger of curdling the milk. This chowder may be made without milk, using only water and the tomatoes and juice in the can. In this case a little thickening will be required.

Butter Cream Icing and Filling.

Make exactly like hard sauce, with unsalted butter creamed, icing sugar, and flavoring, but stop adding sugar before it gets to the hard sauce stage. It must be spread easily and about once and a half the amount of sugar will usually be about the right measure. It must be thick enough to stand up. If no fresh butter is to be procured make a little by shaking some cream in a Mason jar or whipping it to a butter. Three or four minutes is usually all the time it takes to make this butter if it is to be used immediately.

Keeping Fruit.

This hint was given by a fruit grower and will be useful to those who buy lemons, oranges, grapefruit or apples in large quantities.

Wipe each piece of fruit with a soft piece of old all-wool flannel which absorbs the moisture readily. Wrap each piece carefully in new oiled paper, such as confectioners use—not rice paper, which is too stiff. Place the wrapped fruit gently and loosely in a barrel or box; put the receptacle in a cool, dry place, and the contents will keep several months.

Belle Calae.

Boil until soft one-half pound of rice in salted water. When cold add two eggs, a half cupful of sugar and a half package of self-rising flour. Soak a slice of bread in water, drain and take off the crust; mix well with the rice and cook by dropping a spoonful at a time in boiling lard. The cake must not touch the bottom of the pot. Serve with hot coffee.

Better Bacon.

If bacon is cooked on a rack or wire toaster in the broiling oven of the gas stove, with the oven door open, the bacon will be much nicer than when fried, and there will be no smoke in the room. If the door of the broiling oven be left open when cooking any meat there will be no smoke in the kitchen.

PARENTAL CONTROL IS NEEDED

No Substitute for That Effective Aid to Good Morals Can Be of Any Avail.

While of course social control by police regulation, curfew laws and oversight of places of public amusement are necessary and in fact indispensable in caring for the morals of a city, there is also no question that below these and more fundamental is the most ancient government known to man, namely, parental control. In the last score of years the attitude of many excellent people in regard to the duty of the state or municipality to regulate society has had the effect of taking away from some families any thought of their own initiative in the matter. The splendid public school system, the excellent and well-taught Sunday schools are of course necessities in our complex modern life, but to throw upon them the parents' duty of moral education is to invite failure. Add to this the pathetic faith in fate that many parents seem to have in regard to their children's welfare and dangerous conditions of public morals must be the result. Fathers and mothers who will train their children up in the way they should go, supervise their hours of leisure and see that they are in the house at night will do more than all municipal ordinances for the cure of diseased moral conditions.—Portland Evening Express.

Nation Must Change Diet.

Future generations in America, the economists tell us, will have to depend chiefly on cereals and vegetables for their sustenance. Never again shall we enjoy a cheap and abundant meat supply. The pressure of increasing population will drive us to economize food energy by eating a large part of the foodstuffs we now feed to animals.—Owensboro Messenger.

GIVEN PERKIN GOLD MEDAL

Inventor of Celluloid Appropriately Honored by Chemical Societies of United States.

The eighth impression of the Perkin gold medal for important work in industrial chemistry was presented to John Wesley Hyatt, inventor of celluloid, at a joint meeting of the New York sections of the Society of Chemical Industry, the American Chemical Society, and the American Electrochemical Society.

Mr. Hyatt, active in spite of his seventy-six years, expressed his sincere thanks and gave an interesting account of the invention of celluloid. Mr. Hyatt was born at Starkey, Yates county, New York, in 1837. In his early boyhood he acquired a strong taste for mechanical affairs in his father's blacksmith shop. In his sixteenth year he went to Illinois and learned the printing business, working at this trade for ten years.

Later he went to Albany and worked as a journeyman printer for about two years. Seeing a $10,000 offer for a substitute for ivory for billiard balls he began experimenting nights and Sundays in the hope of gaining the reward. He made a number of useful plastic compositions, none of them, however, good enough for billiard balls, but he started to make checkers and dominoes of pressed wood.

It was some time afterward that he invented celluloid and began the manufacture of celluloid and bone dust billiard and pool balls.—Metallurgical and Chemical Engineering.
